

IHRC 10 Year Anniversary Faculty Grants

Project title:

Learning from Delaware's Indigenous Communities, Healing Delaware's Watersheds

Project description

This project will engage UD's environmental humanities and environmental journalism students with Lenape tribal elders and youth to restore a sizeable piece of Lenape tribal property, including a tribal cemetery, by removing invasive plants and replanting the property with native and traditional edible and medicinal plants.

Bio

McKay Jenkins is UD's Cornelius Tilghman Professor of English, Journalism and Environmental Humanities. He has published nine books and dozens of articles on environmental topics; created UD's minor in Environmental Humanities; and is a founder of the state of Delaware's new Master Naturalist Certification Program.

Co-PI's: Jon Cox and Anna Wik